Very good!!!

Great book

Good

I got a used CD, and it was cheaper than new. But, there was some skipping. It wasn't the kind of skipping that makes the CD useless, so I did not send it back. But, it wasn't really new or great quality. Still, I think it's worth getting used.

Great book for my son who is going into 3rd grade this year. It was on his list of required reading assignments for the summer. Has a total of eight chapters and is a paperback book. He really enjoyed it and the price was great!

Cam's school is celebrating Green Day. She and her friend, Eric, have been walking to school instead of riding the bus and bringing in cans and bottles to recycle. However, right before the assembly when the amount of money they've collected from recycling is to be revealed, the money gets stolen. Not to fear, Cam is on the case. With the help of her photographic memory, Cam solves the mystery, and the money is returned. This is a short and easy book for young readers that presents an interesting and entertaining mystery and teaches caring for the environment.

Grandaughter 7 years old reads one everynight and loves them. 100% go on this series.

With pride, principal Dr. Prell declares the elementary school has become a "Green School" with its can collection recycling drive to pay for skylights in order to cut back on electricity. Students have brought in cans that are given to recycling; each can brings in a nickel. The school has 927 rolls of nickels. At the Green Day assembly to show the rolls of nickels to the students before it goes to the bank, the wagon holding the loot instead contains bricks. While the police investigate, photographic memory whiz, Cam Jansen begins "clicking" what she saw earlier in the day in hopes of solving who stole the coins and how. On a roll, Cam gets closer to solving the Green School theft. Targeting second and third graders, the latest Cam Jansen elementary school mystery is a fun tale starring the amateur sleuth at her photographic clicking best as she solves the case. The story line focuses on the how the crime was pulled off but equally on what young children can pragmatically do to help green the planet. The illustrations enhance a fine early elementary school relevant mystery that the audience will love clicking away while driving parents happy (for reading) and crazy (for clicking).Harriet Klausner
