Synopsis

Excerpt from Naval Researches, or a Candid Inquiry Into the Conduct of Admirals Byron, Graves, Hood, and Rodney: In the Action Off Grenada, Chesapeake, Sr. Christophers, and of the Ninth and Twelfth of April, 1782, Being a Reputation of the Plans and Statements of Mr. Clerk, Rear Admiral Ekins, and Others; Founded on Authentic Documents, or Actual Observation Having devoted a considerable portion of the leisure which it has been the lot of many a Sailor on shore to enjoy, to keeping alive in my own mind an interest in the pursuits of the Profession to which I find the attachment which bound me to it in childhood, still unabated, I am desirous that others also should cherish at least an equal interest in studies of such vital importance to their country; and, with this View, I have endeavoured to divest the generally received opinions on certain Naval Movements, of the intricacies and contradictions which have hitherto enveloped them, and which, if suffered to remain, would tend to disgust the young Naval Student by their perplexing Obscurity, and to damp the ardour he might otherwise feel in preparing himself for the momentous duties of his profession.
