A Bastard Of A Place: The Australians In Papua

Synopsis

The story of the five battles that changed Australia forever, this compelling narrative incorporates hundreds of interviews with the soldiers who fought at Kokoda, Milne Bay, Gona, Buna, and Sanananda in 1942 and 1943. Revealed are the very real and engaging experiences of Generals MacArthur and Blamey and other senior Australian commanders who sacrificed many of their senior field officers as scapegoats to protect their own positions, assisted in the making of false legends, and lied about the outcome of the men who fought the battles.

“A valuable read for anyone interested in men at war and particularly for students of the Pacific War.”
—The NYMAS Review

Peter Brune is the author of The Spell Broken, Those Ragged Bloody Heroes, and We Band of Brothers, and is the coauthor of 200 Shots: Damien Parer and George Silk and The Australians at War in New Guinea.

This is a very well researched book that gives a graphic account of the conditions, the bravery, the mistakes and the triumphs of the Australian forces fighting in the early days of the Papua New Guinea campaign. It also shows Australia's problems with political interference from Churchill in England and Roosevelt in the US; how we got landed with McArthur and Blamey ; and how the politicians and senior command were so out of touch with the events at the front. This book should be required reading for all students of modern Australian history; the truth was often censored or twisted at the time and it is only in recent times that balanced versions are coming to light.

Peter Brune is an informed and excellent writer. It is important all Australians develop a strong knowledge of the Papua New Guinea campaign given the significance of our involvement. It has become apparent to me that unless we, as Australians, develop this awareness we will never as a nation know given the revisionism that characterises the remembering of military history. An important read as a part of our striving to know, remember and identify.

Wonderfully researched, and extremely well written. Finally, a record of what our fathers saw and how poorly they were treated. My father came home from the war disgusted with Blamey and hating "Dug Out Doug". Recommended reading.

First-rate account of the Papuan campaign, 1943-43. Nasty, largely unheralded account of the campaign that foiled the Japanese attempt to occupy northern Australia and interdict U.S. supply lines from the U.S. and Hawaii.

Brune's account is very comprehensive and takes in the Milne Bay conflict which had such a pivotal role in the entire Papuan episode. Some excellent in-depth insights into individual soldiers that reinforce the importance of this conflict to Australia's future. We should all be more aware of this struggle.

This is a comprehensive and well-written account of Australian involvement in the battle against Japan in New Guinea during World War II. Peter Brune is an excellent writer and historian.

Book was well researched and written, the lead up to the actual battle of the track lightly covered as this is covered in previous books.

Great book about a dark time in our Australian history
