Best Lesson Planner on the Market for Homeschool. It's large and offers lots of space to write additional notes. We homeschool in Florida and are required to maintain our daily activity records. This planner has been essential for the keeping our detailed records. It's not expensive either. Double-Thumbs Up!

I really like this for our homeschool. Large lined squares for writing. Everything is blank so you can insert your own subjects. It works perfectly for me. A no-frills traditional old school planner.

This daily planner keeps me so organized - I don't know how I functioned without it! Since I only homeschool 1 child, there is many things in there I don't use, but that's fine. The parts I do use are well worth it!

This book was exactly what I wanted when I was student teaching for middle school history and when I taught middle school science! Tons of room to write down notes for two preps!

I really love this planner. I'm a homeschool parent, and this gives me just the organization I need.

The layout is nice - it has a spot for everything you could possibly write down. I have tried other planners, but always end up back to this one.

This is the only lesson plan book I'll use-it's my fifth year using the same book. It has a great layout, size, and I love that it's lined. It fits my schedule perfectly and I love the extra room for notes. A perfect plan book for elementary teachers.

I needed a new planner for this school year but I didn't need a complex one since I homeschool & only have 3 students. This one is perfect for me. It does have a seating chart and other items for the classroom teacher but I love the ample space allowed per page. Each 2 page spread is for one week and I have plenty of room to track what we have done, plan our future weeks and there is space in the margins to make notes and reminders to myself. I also like the fact that has a "landscape" layout and is spiral bound. I definitely am getting alot of use out of this planner and would recommend it to anyone looking for a simple yet very effective planner.
