PreS • Dewdney tackles the topic of staying at Gram and Grandpa's overnight. Llama is excited for his special visit as he packs up his clothes and his stuffed animal, Fuzzy Llama.

However, when he unpacks, he realizes, rather upsettingly, that his comfort object was left behind. Gram and Grandpa spend the day distracting little Llama by playing outside or building in the workshop, but with each activity, he anxiously remembers Fuzzy Llama's absence. While the text carries along with a seemingly pleasing nighttime routine ("Take a bath./Then comb and brush./Settle in for stories. Hush./Finish books/and get a kiss"), the illustrations show Llama looking more distressed and anxious before bed. After Gram asks what's the matter, we watch as "Llama's lips begin to quiver./Llama starts to shake and shiver./Llama needs his Fuzzy near,/but FUZZY LLAMA ISN'T HERE!" The following page shows all three Llamas looking at readers for help. Quickly, it's Grandpa who finds a solution. Grandpa offers a special toy from when he was just a little boy. In a satisfying ending, Llama realizes he's not alone and that he's in his "home away from home." With a carefully crafted rhyming text and comforting painted images that match genuinely the emotion of a toddler's first night away from home, this book is a charming success. VERDICT Parents and caregivers will appreciate the reassuring message that this story offers for one-on-one sharing, and it will function as a heartwarming read-aloud in a bedtime-themed storytime. •Brianne Colombo, Pequannock Township Public Library, NJ

As a grandparent I'm a huge fan of Anna Dewdney's Llama Llama series books (the little ones love them too). So of course I had to immediately order this latest book when it was released earlier this month. In this story little Llama Llama is going for his first overnight ever. He loves spending time with Gram and Grandpa even though he's probably a little nervous. He helps mom pack his overnight bag, and gets ready for the car ride. After mom leaves and Llama Llama goes to unpack his bag he realizes "fuzzy" Llama is missing and he can't stop thinking about him. However, he's still enjoying some nice snacks and some new ways to keep busy and have new kinds of fun at Gram and Grandpa's, but when bedtime comes he is missing "fuzzy" llama. Grandpa, however, manages to come to the rescue and makes everything all right. What is so nice about this book and the other Llama Llama books in the series is that they discuss a problem or issue and come up with a solution in the process. Each book is told in simple, rhyme verse which children (especially little ones) love and find easy to memorize as well. The bold illustrations, pleasing colors and details make this book and this series a pleaser for kids, parents, teachers and of course grandparents.

Like all of Anna Dewdney's children books, this is another MUST HAVE. Llama Llama Gram and Grandpa is cute, funny and teaches some morals all at the same time. I love this book.

I am finding that any Llama Llama book is worth adding to our collection. We bought this to take when we stayed with our grandkids for several days, and they both enjoyed it as they could relate.

Little Llama goes to stay with Gram and Grandpa for the first time but soon realizes that he has forgotten to bring his Fuzzy Llama. Oh, he doesn't want to tell Grama and Grandpa, but how will he survive. Though distractions help him forget it for a while, he eventually has to face his dilemma. As expected, there is a wonderful solution at hand. Beautiful, colorful, expressive illustrations and minimal text. Very cute.

my granddaughter read it to me with some help from mom on facetime!! How special. You can't miss with this one. She is 5 and in kindergarten. Just great for helping youngsters view of first time at grandma's house.

I love Anna Dewdney and I miss her already. I bought these books for my daughter 12 years ago and have gifted them to every child for baby showers, birthdays, holiday presents, ANY TIME I can. These will be a BIG hit if you buy them. I just love them.

there aren't a lot of grandparent books for small tots...I think my grandson will like this when he is a little older...he's 13 months now and it's too involved a story for him to sit still.

Grand kids like Llama Llama books.

We love love love the llama llama books but the smaller cardboard books are way too short.
