Together Again Beginning readers will welcome the return of several favorite characters. Amber Brown stars in two titles by Paula Danziger, illus. by Tony Ross. In It's a Fair Day, Amber Brown, the heroine and her best friend, Justin, enjoy a vacation with their families. Unfortunately, things turn sour when Amber's parents start arguing and she gets lost at the county fair. Get Ready for Second Grade, Amber Brown focuses on first-day jitters that are quickly quelled. Grade 1-3-The characters in these prequels for beginning readers lose nothing from their original portrayals in the longer books for older children. In Get Ready, Danziger effortlessly guides young

Amber through an encounter with the unknown as a second grader. The child confesses her fears-will her new teacher give "seven hours of homework?-"What if she's an alien from some foreign planet?" A ray of light shines on her as she begins class-Ms. Light. The woman calms worries with ease, and the "Bright Lights" include all of her students, in particular a newly confident Amber. Childlike conversations and humor capture the highlights of the school day. In the second title, a trip to a county fair includes the Browns and the family of Amber's friend Justin Daniels, but all is not well between her mother and father. The author's gift for characterization places Amber's emotions before readers; an escape from the tensions between her parents creates a potentially dangerous moment when she loses her way at the fair. The book's puns and kid-oriented humor target a serious topic with childlike truthfulness and simplified text. In both books, Ross's watercolor-and-pen illustrations emphasize the action and emotions. Mary Elam, Forman Elementary School, Plano, TX

This is a Summer reading book for my almost 7 year old heading into 2nd grade. She picked this from a list for fiction. It is a Level 3 or Guided Reading Level K. Transitional Reader; multi syllable & compound words, more dialogue, different points of view, more complex storylines & characters, greater range of genres. Perfect book for my almost 2nd grader! "It's the first day of second grade for Amber Brown! She is excited - but a little nervous too. Second grade had better be ready for Amber Brown!" My daughter was able to read this book with little to no help. We liked the story & the illustrations were good too!

I purchased this for my son who is in 2nd grade. It was a little long for him but that is because he is a lazy reader. The story kept our attention.

My now Third grader enjoyed this book sooooo much. He wanted to keep it and just keep reading this book.

Love the book

These types of books are part of our annual tradition for the night/week before the first day of school. We started this in Pre-k to prepare our very shy daughter of what to expect in school. I'm glad there were other books like this for subsequent grades to keep the tradition going.

I did not like it when Hannah said "Babies" when she saw the animal back packs. I liked it when Justin said unhappy burp ton to you.
